of those posts down to watching their cash flow, it is more a matter of being good sales people and also getting noticed... Moving on from the top page... Middle of the funnel - landing on the middle page The middle page is used to turn visitors to sales leads. These posts are different than the top post in that they are usually about the product rather than creating interest in the brand/company. Because the middle page has shown a high level of interest in the product, the next best option to try and convert these visitors to sales leads is to nurture them by making them aware of and offer exclusive deals. Bottom Page - delivery of a Thank You E-mail At this level, visitors are willing to purchase, but don't really know the brand/company so close attention has to be paid to get them to make that final purchase. One thing to note on the bottom page is just because you are making the sale does not mean you need to close the process... What do people buy? The answer to this question is easy... People buy one of the following products... Software Mobile App Laptops Cars/Trucks Home Improvement Cleaning Products At many of the top levels of the funnel, people will pay for products they can quickly get and use, and one of the biggest risks to any business is if this is not the case for them. Stages of the Funnel Most business owners have heard about the funnel before. You may already know where you are in the funnel but did you know there are different sections to every funnel? This is where the Funnel is not just simple revenue, cost and profit... Let's look at the funnel in more detail... The 'egg carton' type flow of traffic The term egg carton type flow is often applied to the funnel. This means the funnel starts at the top of the funnel and flattens out and on the first few pages of the funnel the traffic has the most interest/excitement for the company, then all interest in the company begins to slowly wane. The 'up/down' flow of traffic This is an ideal funnel for the company that focuses more on creating awareness and educating people about the product or service. Like the egg carton, the funnel starts at the top of the funnel and flatt

Flamingo (big wave) The word flamingo, when used in reference to a wave, can mean a steep, wave-breaking wave, usually occurring in smaller surf. The name may be derived from the flamingo's beak-like bill, or it may be a reference to the bright orange head that is characteristic of a wave in the form of a flamingo's wings (hence the name), or a reference to the red head of a true albino flamingo. Alternatively, it may derive from the short-legged nature of flamingos. Category:Surfing terminologyQ: How to communicate with a secondary Domino server to enforce LDAP on a single server I want to know, how we can force the users to authenticate against LDAP on a single server machine. I want to authenticate users using SSO. So i have a design in my mind where if a user logs into a web app, it searches for a user in LDAP using the users credentials and authenticates. After authentication, if it needs to authenticate against MS Active Directory, it sends the credentials to an LDAP server which queries users in AD. The problem arises when a user logs into a LDAP server, due to the way LDAP works (users can be in multiple domains) they can be in the AD, if the LDAP server is the AD server. But the web server that I am currently working on has a single domain which is my custom domain. So all my existing users in LDAP are taken as users in our AD. Users who are login into the web server are those who don't have a AD account in our LDAP. So now i want to not allow login into the web server if a user is in LDAP but not in the AD. What are the possible ways to achieve this? Do you have any references on this? This shouldnt be a duplicate. Since the question on this forum does not have a close voting feature. Thank You! A: I'm assuming that you want to connect SSO users to your app without letting them become AD users. LDAP doesn't enforce anything. You need the OS to enforce user accounts to have an AD account. If the user doesn't have it, login is denied. The only way to prevent this is to use AD. Create AD users and distribute the login information to your LDAP server
